SOCIETY IS TO BLAMB.

There is a general discussion of the erank" question now on in the newspapers and that peculiarly American renius is receiving more attention from the editors than he would seem to be entitled to. In line with the arguments advanced in THE HERALD one week ago, the Jackson Patriot very forcibly mys that American society has gone daft on the subject of brain cultivation. It takes the children at five years old and puts them through a course of training that is unnatural in all respects, often evertaxing the immature brains and developing the nervous organization at the expense of physical health and strength. Many of these persons live morbid and useless fives. Under the methods in vogue it must be expected that there will be, at all times, a number of persons in crowded communities whose minds are wavering between eanity or meanity. From this class the so-called 'cranks,' or 'maniacal assassins' as one writer calls them, are mainly recruited. 'onging for wealth, or social display, an . educated to lives of idleness so far as manual labor is concerned, society by its faise ideals and methods has ruined them. Their minds are abnormally active and are quick to mire upon any incident out of the ordinary course of affairs and apply | solutly un preventable. it to their own condition. For the most part in needy circumstances, dependent upon the labor of others for a living, neticing the inequalities of condition and seeing everywhere prosperous vice and needy virtue, the relief of their own circumstances comes uppermost, and moral and material considerations become hopelessly confused. Society has unwisely educated them away from honest labor, and they repay it for its mistaken efforts by plunging into vice or becoming its dangerous enemies.

GENERAL ALGER.

Incipient presidential booms are now the order of the day in politics. They spring up like mushrooms today and of philanthropic John Bull all will go disappear like fog before the sun tomorrow. There is, however, something disposition to shape the destinies of includes Alger as the legitimate succesthat General Alger has but one choice for the nemination, and that choice is Blaine. But there are grave apprehensions that no matter how willing the spirit of the Secretary of State may be, the flesh is too weak to withstand the strain of a heated campaign. Other considerations are urged against the candidacy of Blaine, the most conspicuous one being that he could not, from a political standpoint, afford to be disloyal to President Harrison, nor to enter the race against him. These reasons may have weight with Blaine later on, and his most intimate friends represent that at the proper time he will write a letter declining to be a candidate. If he shall do this the race will resolve itself into Harrison against the field, with Alger well to the front. One thing is certain and that is that Blaine's friends are not for Harrison Are they strong enough to defeat him and nominate their man? If so, Russell A. Alger stands nearer to the presidental succession than any man in America. General Aiger is an amiable man, one whom every other man who grows to know him is compelled to like. He has an unassallable record as a soldier, an enviable one as the governor of this state. His fortune was amassed by honorable business methods and he dispenses from his abundance to the poor with unsparing hand. Not gifted with the grace and polish of the trained orator, but the simple candor and honesty of his public utterances are freighted with eloquence. He is a typical American gentleman and in the office of chief executive of the nation would prove to be a commanding figure. CLOSED THE DOORS.

Nothing can be gained by the Grand Rapids Improvement board by imitating the policy pursued by the board of trade in excluding representatives of the press from the meetings called to discuss ways and means to attract manufactures to this city. Reporters are quite as loyal to the best interests of the city as other citizens, and surely the editors will suffer no details of pending negotiations to be made pulshe unless it shall be for the benefit of the city. The newspapers do not desire to pry into private affairs, but when matters of public interest are being discassed by a public body, representing down such measures when they are the public, they desire to have the submitted for a vote. Even congress privilege of being represented. The newspapers stand ready to enlist public interest and public enterprise for the welfare of the city. There is not a paper in the city but that will extend | ten years ago as the pet of Lily Langto the Improvement Board, or any other public body, the free use of its columns to make known its out of him. If when he shall get the sime, purposes and objects se they affect the public. It is passing strange that public he may be something more,like a man. bodies will refuse to rely upon the judgment of reporters and editors present status of the Improvement be no depression on this score, for the beard is due aim at entirely so the whole record of the man's life is writed been purchased by Gregg Williams.

work of the newspapers. Its succes will be measured by the support accorded to it by the newspapers. If it shall close its doors to representative of the papers it can hardly expect that the papers will throw open wide their doers to it. News is a peculiar article, and although the judgment of the average man may be excellent on other subjects he may be totally ignorant as to the value of news. It is not the purpose to censure the board by the foregoing, but rather to show that it an gain everything by taking the reporters into full communion and fellowship when matters of past, present or future moment are being discussed

ACCIDENTS INEVITABLE. Many newspapers discuss the recent secident in Chicago wherein two girls were killed in a collision between a street car and railway train as if the fatality was remarkable and unparalled. Hardly a day passes but some unfortunate is crushed to death beneath the cruel wheels of Chicago's cable cars and only in case of a double death or triple tragedy is the matter thought to be of more importance than to be worth a single head in an obscure corner of the great dailies of that great city. The accident mentioned, however, was a little out of the order of such Chicago episodes and in commenting upon the falliblity of human agencies in guarding against disaster and death on the street care the Detroit News says: There were three different men whose separate and individual duty it was to guard the safety of that car. It was the gate-tender's business to keep the gate closed when the train was approaching. It was the conductor's business to step forward and survey the track in both directions. The driver's business was to put no wheel of the car the track before unon coming sure no train was in eight. If human life cannot safely be entrusted to three moral agents acting independently, any one of whom, if he did his duty, was a bar against accident, it tollows that accident as ab-

EGYPT'S NEW RULER.

Abbas Pasha, the successor of Tewfik Pasha, as khedive of Egypt is a young lad but yet well advanced in his teens. A correspondent in discussing the probabilities in future for Egypt says with emphasis that vast importance attaches to the disposition and policy of the youthful Abbas Pasha, who been so suddenly elevated to the position of khedive of the land where flows the Nile. Whether the young man, who is now only eighteen years of age, has yet reached a maturity of mind sufficient to have a policy of his own remains to be seen. If he submits to the paternal authority well, perhaps, but should he evince a substantial in the combination which Egypt af his own adolescent mind France and Russia may be counted perhaps, active support, and then the long-looked-for explosion of the powder magazine! He was enthroned yesterday with pomp.

PHILOSOPHERS Of New York's Sorosis ne time since held a symposium on "How to Manage Husbands." The women submitted many plans during the debate, but the unbridled tongue and broomstick cut no figure in their profound discussions. From this it may be concluded that until a more scientific, not to say esthetic system of husband management shall be discovered and approved as expedient the two ancient and honorable weapons mentioned will be continued in use to subdue the recalcitrant and fractious sterner halves.

SIR JOHN FROST visited the regions of the northwest during the week just closed. The coal dealers were made happy by his call, but the coal consumers were not convulsed with joy. He also skipped over the Sierras and nipped the buds in southern California, doing great damage to the crops. He has not been forgetful of Michigan, but Sir John is always welcome here, provided he is not too demonstrative.

PRINCE ALBERT VICTOR'S funeral will not be held until Wednesday of this week. It will be an imposing ceremony, tatended with all the trappings of royal grief. The funeral pageant will pass through London on its way to Windsor the place of burnal. The demonstrations of respect for the deceased will be more general than when he was alive. He will be soon forgotten.

CARDINAL GIBBONS in a note to General Johnstone urges the latter to do all in his power to prevent the extension of the Louisiana Lottery charter. If Cardinal Gibbons would urge many of the members of his churches to decline to purchase the tickets of the giant octopus it would seek no extension of its charter. The lottery lives because earned dollars.

SISTERS OF DOMINIC. BLAINE AND HIS DUTY.

he New York Tribune Gives Fatherly Advice.

New York, Jan. 16 .- The Tribune says editorially: "The remark is often heard "that Mr. Blaine ought not to be a candidate while secretary of state under President Harrison." This. when examined, is a somewhat absurd view. If the people desire a man it makes no difference what station of life he is holding. They have the right to ask him to serve them. If a member of the cabinet should be a candidate it will be purely a person question between him and the president whether he should remain in office or not. The question does not in the least affect his right to candifacy. It is one to be settled by the president alone, or by the president and nimself. In 1852, when Mr. Webster was secretary of state under President Fillmore, both gentlemen were candi-dates before the national whig conven-tion at Baltimore, and had a very stub-born contest. In the end, after a great born contest. In the end, after a great number of ballots, General Scott was nominated. Mr. Fillmore, receiving many more votes than Mr. Webster, was seriously weakened by Mr. Webster's candidacy. But Mr. Webster's candidacy. But Mr. Webster's candidacy. But Mr. Webster continued to be secretary of state under Mr. Fillmore, and so far as the public knew, with cordial relations until his death, five months afterward. After the citation of this precedent nothing should be heard of the improperty of a member of the cabinet running for the presidency.

We have no knowledge as to whether Mr. Blame intends to be a candidate or the circumstances to do either, must be conceded. His continued retention of the state department is another and is purely to be settled by the president or by his own resignation if he finds himself in any wise embarrassed by remaining secretary of state.

ELECTRICITY IN THE AWNING. Two Men Badly Shocked by a Current at Newburg, N. Y.

NEWEURO, N. Y., Jan. 16 .- Scott Betterton, employed in the grocery store of James McGinn at Fishkill, while standing in front of the store Thursday afternoon placed his hand on the awning iron and received such a severe electric shock that he was unable to let liam Hutchinson hastened to his aid. Hutchinson grasped Retterion's wrist and received a shock which felled him to the sidewalk. Immediately recovering himself he made another attempt but instead of seizing Betterton's wrist again he lifted his feet from the ground. This broke the circuit, caused Betterton's grip to relax and let him fall. He struck heavily upon the stone flagging and received a severe cut, which rendered him unconscious. The excitement and fright caused a younger employe of the store to faint. Dr. kitteridge dressed the wound and yesterday Betterton was reported to be doing well. The awning from was charged with electricity by coming in contact with the electric light wires.

"Maria, it's a periwinkle," said Jones in a tone that admitted of no dispute. Why do you sak? "Because it says in this novel, 'Her eyes were as blue as a periwinkle,' and I wanted to know how blue that was."

A Wild Guess

My odd little friend, Roy Gregor, so often surprises us with quaintly worded remarks that I am once in awhile of the opinion that some of his ancestors were of the "rale ould Irish shtock," and that he has inherited their talent for making what we call "Irish bulls." None but an Irishman could gravely assert that ice cream is baked in a cold oven, and if this reply of Roy's to a ques-tion is not a genuine Irish bull, I am at a loss to give it a name.

"Roy," said his mother, "this can't be your stocking. Yours had a hole in it when you came home from school."

"You, mamma," said Boy, after a moment's study, "but the hole is wored out, I guess."—Harper's Young People.
